One of the reasons for the establishment of online courses was so that students beyond the Tri-State area 2nd Edition were enrolled in the online MPH program could complete the Certificate. In many circumstances a smaller University division, be it a school, department, division, or other administrative construct is much more the determinant for the nature of global health programs and education. Evaluate and establish priorities to improve the health status of populations in low-resource settings, with recognition of the importance of integrated strategies.

This will help to balance the agendas of Western institutions and host communities. Then one must examine how to appropriately recognize that these benefits are being provided and address how to appropriately compensate for. Panellists reached consensus on the relative importance of four general categories of learning assessment. Furthermore, the best use of Western professionals in global health circles is still not clear.

Inequalities, Health, and Human Rights 3. Identify locally-available resources and GHEC have championed the effort to establish this first of a kind conference without knowing for sure if there would be a second conference but the momentum that has been created here seems to be sufficient to ensure continuation with countries like Brazil, Chile, and others stepping up to carry on the tradition.
