Marine pollution is a major source of concern. Yes, the conditions of war and instability elsewhere in the world – in which many European states have already played an intimate role – need to be tackled so that people are not forced to leave their home in the first place. Beyond whether it is a sea at war or not, the Mediterranean is undoubtedly a "disputed sea", a space of contention between different European Union institutions and between them and the member states: between Italy and France, between Italy and Spain, between Italy and the rest of the EU; between civil society and states, between cities and their national governments. CapeTimesCapeTown21October Get At the end of the room also, a single large tub dedicated the topic of research.

Therefore, the international maritime presence remains vital to maintain
